HPAI provides 03 years of aircraft maintenance engineering duly approved by the DGCA Gov. of India under CAR 147 Basic and having two stream.

1. Mechanical (B1.1)
2. Avionics (B2)

To become an aircraft maintenance engineer one has to undergo three years training program and a license has to be obtained from the DGCA to certify the civil aircraft. During the entire course curriculum one has to clear all the modules conducted by the DGCA apart from 06 semester exams conducted by the institute, followed by a type training from an airlines/MRO/Manufacturer and clear theory, practical and oral exam under DGCA, thereby entitle him to get a license on a specific aircraft. This license is valid throughout the world since it comes under ICAO (International Civil Aviation Organization) HPAI as a DGCA approved institute will provide theoretical and practical training to cover all the modules as per the allotment of the different category (B1.1 and B2) to the individual. The practical training will be given in three phases

A. In House (Institute)

B. HAL (which engaged itself for manufacturing of military aircraft) and

C. Outsource - Minimum 30% of total practical training will be given on live aircraft which has to be outsource for which the institute is having an agreement with AI ESL Mumbai and Nagpur base along with Go Air , Nagpur base to cover the outsources practical as per the mutual agreement . Apart from this, It is the only institute which has tied up with Hindustan Aeronautics Limited (HAL), Nasik Division to provide the basic practical training to the students of HPAI and exposing a big engineering environment in the field of aviation.

B. Sc. Aeronautics

The institute is affiliated to University of Mumbai (UoM) for B.Sc aeronautics programs. Which is a dual program with aircraft maintenance engineering. The syllabus of both the courses is almost identical so as to avoid stress while undergoing this course. This course goes parallel along with the AME and splits into 06 semester (03 Years). Up to 04 semesters our institute conducts the semester exam and last two semesters is conducted by the UoM.

While opting this course one is having the advantages of going for higher study like MS in Aerospace Engineering in India or abroad which will entitle an individual to go in a research field thereby making him entitle to join in different aviation sector like ISRO, DRDO, HAL, NAL, TATA Advance system etc. Fortunately few of our students in every batch prefer to undergo the masters abroad. Apart from this one can also appear in competitive exams like UPSC, MPSC, AFCAT, CDS etc. In addition to that one can join any airlines administrative department after completion of MBA in Aviation.
